

Painting the Rainbow

Pixel Pole, Illustrated by Liliana Militaru

Painting the Rainbow by PixelPole is the ideal storybook for parents and young children who enjoy reading together or for older children who start reading on their own. The book is designed to invite parents to share the reading experience with the children by taking turns reading aloud. While the left-hand pages containing short sentences and helpful illustrations are designed for children, the story continues deeply into details on the right-hand pages designed for parents. The book tells the story of a child, Michael, chosen to rescue the magic garden in danger of being left colorless when each color wants to rule the magic place. Through a series of funny and surprising scenes and dialogue, readers can join Michael on his journey, learn new things about colors and decide for themselves which color is supreme. Will Michael be able to bring harmony to the magical garden? This original tale is sure to leave you smiling with admiration for the way the garden was finally painted.
