I shouted with delight, and pointed it out to Rosina, who answered my exultations with a faint smile. My blood curdled at the expression of her countenance: for many hours she had been in deep thought and I perceived that the smile was forced to please me, the intelligence I had imparted affording her but little pleasure. I ascribed it to weariness and exhaustion and hoping soon to be able to relieve her, I steered irrid f.-r the ody part of the shore which proiiisfti o a safe descent. In an hour I was dte to it and, anxious to Land before dark, I icc-r-d the boat with the sail hoisted through tie surf, which was much heavier than I exported. As soon as her bow struck the beach, tie boat was thrown on her broadside, and it revt-iired ill aay exertion to save my beloved, wb.: ch I did not effect without our being completely wahod by the surf, which, in a few ciinutes. dabled the boat to pieces. I bore her to a cave at a short distance from where we landed and, wrapping her up in a cloak which I had saved from the boat, took away her nuns attire, and exposed it to dry in the powerful rays of the sun. I went in search of food, which I soon obtained: banana and cocoanuts grew in profusion and in beauty, and fresh water ran down in noisy rills. I bore them to her, and congratulated her that we were now beyond all pursuit, and in a spot which promised to supply us with all that we required. She smiled languidly her thoughts were elsewhere. Her clothes were dry, and I brought them to her: she shuddered at the sight of them, and seemed to muster up her resolution before she could put them on. Night closed in...
