Extrait: ...the machine being in motion, his foot slipped into the hole in the platform, causing him to be thrown against the knives connected with the machine, and his right arm was cut off at the elbow. The jury brought in a verdict for $5,000, upon which judgment was entered. This appeal is from the judgment and from an order denying a motion for a new trial. The defendant asks for a reversal of the judgment and order upon several grounds, viz., that the trial court erred in the admission of evidence, that it improperly instructed the jury, and erroneously refused to give certain instructions requested by the defendant. It is also contended by the defendant that the evidence does not sustain the verdict, and that the amount of the damages given is excessive. We will consider these questions in the order stated. On the trial of the cause, plaintiff introduced evidence showing that at times during the operation of the machine—at which the accident occurred—it was necessary to shut it down, for the reason that the engine driving the same was too small for its load, and that when the machine was again started the increased burden thereby put upon the engine would reduce the pressure of the steam, and that, for this reason, strict orders had been given that the machine should not be shut down, unless absolutely necessary. Defendant contends that the court committed error in admitting this testimony, for the reason that it was immaterial, and also tended to confuse the jury and to make them believe that the defendant was negligent generally in the conduct of its business. The answer of the plaintiff to this contention is that the evidence in question was offered for the purpose of explaining why he did not...
